A list of weapons mentioned or featured in Star Trek. You may find more here on the Memory Aplha wiki:

https://memory-alpha.fandom.com/wiki/Special:Search?query=weapons&scope=internal&contentType=&ns%5B0%5D=0&ns%5B1%5D=4&ns%5B2%5D=112&ns%5B3%5D=2900 revolver was a hand-held projectile firearm using a chemical reaction to propel a lead bullet battle-axe was a type of hand-held melee weapon. This weapon consisted of a broad axe head supported by a study handle.

A dagger is a small hand-held blade weapon.

Crossbow

A claymore was a Scottish sword.

The bow and arrow was a weapon used for hunting or for combat. The discipline of using the bow and arrow is known as archery, and a person who uses the bow and arrow is called an archer.

The Xindi-Reptilian biorifle weapon was an example of biotechnology, a rifle-type energy weapon.

A musket is an antiquated form projectile weapon developed and used on Earth. It was loaded with gunpowder and a lead ball, the latter of which was the projectile fired. They may also be equipped with a bayonet attached at the tip of the gun's muzzle.

The M16 was a series of automatic rifles made by Colt Firearms for the United States armed forces. The M16 rifle and its variants saw extensive service with the US Armed Forces from the 1960s to at least the mid 21st century.

laser pistol

The Knife of Kirom was a sacred Klingon artifact, over one thousand years old, said to be stained with the blood of Kahless the Unforgettable. The Knife of Kirom was kept in the sacred vault on Qo'noS, where no one was permitted to remove it.

Cook's Club knife

Jackal knife

Shinzon's jackal knife

This large dagger was carried by Praetor Shinzon. He attempted to use it to kill Captain Jean-Luc Picard aboard the Scimitar in 2379.

Double shadow knife

The kut'luch was a bladed weapon traditionally used by Klingon assassins. The weapon had an unevenly serrated blade and was capable of inflicting a very serious wound. The kut'luch was frequently twisted while the blade was still inside its target to inflict as much pain and damage as possible. The weapon looked similar to a mevak.

"This is a Gin-tak spear! it is meant for battle, not tilling fields!"

The bat'leth, or "sword of honor", was a traditional Klingon blade weapon. It was widely considered the most popular weapon among Klingon warriors.

The isomagnetic disintegrator was a shoulder-mounted directed-energy weapon used by the Federation Starfleet, similar to an ancient Human bazooka. The weapon fired purple energy bolts.

A grenade is a small self-contained weapon with a built-in time delay that is thrown or launched. Grenades vary according to the payload, which may contain an explosive, incendiary, gas, or electronic components designed to stun, damage, or kill.

A gas grenade is a hand-held projectile weapon used for incapacitating an enemy. When activated and thrown, the gas grenade releases a gas of some kind into the area. A gas grenade can be non-lethal or very lethal, depending on the gas it releases, and on the physiology of the target. A gas grenade differs from a smoke grenade in that the former is meant to incapacitate while the latter is intended to reduce visibility.

A fragmentation grenade, or frag grenade for short, was a type of explosive device used during the 20th and early-21st century.

Fire stick is the term used on Neural to refer to the flintlock projectile weapons that Klingons had introduced to the people of that world in approximately 2266. (

The energy whip was a hand-held weapon used by the Ferengi. When lashed, it fired a pulse of energy that stunned the target.

The Winchester Model 1200 was a pump action shotgun made by Winchester from 1965 to the late 20th century. These weapons were used by the United States armed forces.

The M1921/28 Thompson submachine gun, commonly known as the Tommy gun, was an automatic projectile weapon developed in the United States of America in the 1920s. It became particularly recognizable as a symbol of organized crime in the first half of the 20th century, and especially of the Chicago gangsters. The Thompson fired the .45 ACP cartridge and its rate of fire depended on the specific model.

fencing blade

In Bajoran prophecy, the Sword of Stars was an object that, according to interpretations of Trakor's Third Prophecy, would destroy the Celestial Temple.

The long sword was a medieval weapon used by knights during the middle ages.

A type of ceremonial bladed sword used by some Klingon warriors.

A katana was a traditional Japanese sword.

A gladius was a Roman sword.

A cutlass was a 18th century sword.

The Sword of Kahless

The Sword of Kahless was the first bat'leth ever forged. It was designed and created by Kahless the Unforgettable and which has been dated to the 9th century AD. According to Klingon mythology, Kahless created the sword by dropping a lock of his hair into lava from the Kri'stak volcano, and then cooling the burning lock in the Lake of Lusor and forging it into a blade. (TNG: "Rightful Heir")

A smoke grenade was a non-lethal bomb that gave off thick smoke when it exploded. They were usually used to provide cover in the form of a smoke-screen.

A shotgun was a projectile weapon, based on technology dating back to Earth's 19th century.

A rapier was a sharpened, pointed, thin sword used for attack and defense.

A plasma grenade was a type of hand-thrown explosive device utilized by various cultures, one of the components of which was trinitrogen chloride.

A plasma rifle was the rifle version of a hand-held plasma weapon used by many species. These weapons were used by Humans during the mid-22nd century. They were carried on Earth starships even after the advent of phase weapons. While not particularly high-yield, they were capable of killing a target. (ENT: "Broken Bow", "Vox Sola", "Regeneration")

A pistol was just one artifact found in San Francisco in 2368. According to Data it was a "forty-five caliber single action cavalry pistol invented by Colt Firearms in 1873".

A pike was a type of hand-held melee weapon. This weapon was a long thrusting spear with a shaft supporting a spearhead.

On Rigel VII, this was one of the weapons available to a Kalar warrior. The spearhead was shaped like a clover leaf. The connection between spearhead and shaft had feathers attached to it. Some of these weapons were decorated with a banner.